

Progress

Independent Study Mentorship

Weekly Report 27: March 24- March 30, 2018

This week has been fundamental in helping me reshape my motivation for the ISM course. After a quick week that including reassessing my work so far, it helped me focus more on the work that I needed to pay more attention to in order to improve for my final product's overall presentation. For instance, I was determined to begin working more diligently on my website and wrap up my research for ISM. This became true for the most part considering that I was able to put a website that is up and running with my own domain.

My website was created through the guidance of my dad who helped me analyze what information I wanted to focus on and be the main idea for the website. This helped me create tabs and key words for the website that would help be better indicators for users. Having this website up and running also is motivating me even more to start putting information up onto the website. This is vital not only because that will lead to the final stages of my product, but also because by putting information up it will allow me to begin testing what I do and don't like about something when it is posted. Getting a head start on this final outcome is enabling me to ensure the most accurate perfection.

Going forward I hope to begin utilizing my resources and start testing out my research on the websites format that way I can also get the feedback from veterinarians on how they would like to see the usage of my research.